Choris was expedition artist on Russia's second circumnavigation which Les merveilleuses histoires danimaux (52 histoires) (French Edition) through the South Seas and north to Alaska in search of the North-West Passage. He accepted that nitrogen-enriched manures could make a contribution but he repudiated any attempt to explain soil fertility exclusively in terms of the combination of chemicals. Their short agricultural tours of Suffolk and Norfolk in the July and September of that year, in the company of Young, convinced the brothers of the superiority of English agricultural methods: its innovative crop rotation system which did not require land to lie fallow, its comprehensive use of enclosure, its novel use of carrots and turnips as fodder crops on reclaimed fenland, and its consequent concentration of livestock farming.
