Currently, 10 neuroscience nurses are now serving as coordinators for 55 clinics. However, wearing a dress was challenging when providing care to bedridden patients. Barrow, however, explored the option of having NPs work in the Division of Neurological Surgery to assist with the overall care of neurosurgical patients on the general wards and intermediate care area and to facilitate timely patient discharge from the hospital. While the scope of neuroscience nursing expands at Barrow, the challenge of providing expert nursing care will remain.
